THE TAMARACK

North Central High School
June, 1930

AUDITORIUM ENTRANCE, NORTH CENTRAL HIGH

HOBART E. ROWLANDS

The class of June, 1930, dedicates this Tamarack to Hobart E. Rowlands.

For five years Mr. Rowlands has worked tirelessly on perhaps the school's greatest project—The North Central News. Under his direction our paper has won many national honors, bringing praise and fame to North Central.

The Tamarack, too, is indebted to him, for it is he who spends hours after school taking and developing the fine club pictures.

North Central owes much to this man who is always cheerful and willing to work for the good of the school.

Class Will

Scene: Probate court.

Time: June 1930.

Characters: Judge, Bailiff, Clerk, Senior B class.

Judge: (Taps with gavel) "Probate court will now come to order."

Bailiff: (Taps with gavel) "Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye, the high court of the commonwealth of North Central high school is in session. Approach and present any cause on which you wish a just and righteous decision."

Clerk: (Taking documents to the judge) "The class will of the North Central graduating class of June 1930."

Judge: (Reads) "We, the undersigned being the chosen of this class for this, our last will and testament, bequeath to the next class all those who believe that four years is not time enough to grasp the golden opportunities that N. C. offers.

"Roland Johnson, our most worthy president, doing things in his usual big-hearted way wills his athletic build and ability to little Goliath. (Where will he put them?)

"Although it does not seem fitting and proper to do this act, Billie Stafford and Margaret Kelly want us to will their fire-in-the-attic hair to Duke Thyrian and Clyde Vigil.

"As Maryalice Folsom and Maurice Persons are leaving the school together, Dick Ireland, taking no chances, leaves his one and only Shirley Fisher in the joint care of his sis and her brother.

"When we asked E. Horton Herman what he wished to leave, he modestly replied he will leave his position as the basketball team's ORATOR to 'Iron Man' Gullidge, his school famous way with 'femmes' to Ray Hendricks, his——but we can cut him off there.

"After looking over the list of possible candidates Pauline Kipp decided to leave her Girls' League experience to Ray Langenbach. (Ray, you know, was almost made Pow Wow Princess.)

"Evidently Adelaide Dehuff has enough 'it' to call it 'those' so she willingly leaves half her surplus to lovable Lenore Harmon and that sweet Bernadine Royer child.

"Oh, yes, half the time we believe that 'Kraut' Schmitt is blushing; nevertheless, he leaves his natural sallow complexion to a Miss Schumacher.

"By special request of Miss Pettit, Cliff Freed and 'Shorty' McKay leave the school together as friends.

"The firm of Rebillard, Becher, Prague and company leave the News office full of paper.

"Ralph Torney, in a moment of unusual selfishness decides to take along his ability to 'bill and coo' between scenes and back stage. (Only a few students will get the significance of that sentence.)

"Ev McNew, who has been willed to every senior B class since 1924, we have decided to take along; while Howard McNew after a second of meditation consents to leave his ability as a tumbler in Guy Barnes's keeping till the next Delta Hi-Jinx.

"How could we forget these two charming girls—Ruth Woodruff and Betty Cook? These racketeers have decided to leave the old racket game.

"Katy Flynne, our little gypsy sweetheart, leaves her unusual character, dancing ability and dramatic ability for screaming and fainting to Bill Brubaker.

"Girls take notice—Earl Wyatt, N. C. musical comedy star, leaves his naturally curly hair to Marion Malmoe.

"We feel sure that the stage crew will profit by this will. Paul 'Susanna' Anderson leaves his uncanny ability to handle drops and flies to this squad.

"Well, well, well, here's Margaret Green's will. Her luck at getting good blind dates she very willingly leaves to Janet McDonald.

"Don McGougan, made famous by his red underwear scene, leaves those crimson pajamas in Miss Jones's keeping until someone is able to fill them as well as Don did.

"Bob Crosby leaves his big line and ability to make ten girls think they are 'the only one' to Bill Pollard. We hope Bill gets as much kick out of it as Bob has.

"Lorraine Schimke, who has written editorials for the News, the Tamarack and for students in English classes, wills her ability to Dorothy Smith and Evelyn Mowbray.

"Ivan Hastings, that modest little boy with the big gruff voice doesn't know how he can ever get along without his dramatic and orating ability, but at last he has decided to leave a little bit of it to Bill Shaw.

"Ralph Hove has decided to give up imitating Rudy Vallee but he hopes that Ben Roberts will fill the much regretted vacancy in North Central.

"Those who were not mentioned in this will all leave N. C. good wishes, luck and conquests, and yet we all leave N. C. with regret."

Judge: (Adjusting spectacles) "If there are any who are not satisfied with the provisions made in this will, I would suggest they see the endower personally anywhere, anytime. Court is adjourned."

Class History

Early one morning about four years ago a green bunch of frosh trundled up to the east entrance. After receiving a bulletin that said something about a zero period, whatever that was, they set out to find the auditorium.

After much searching and some not too gentle persuasion on the part of the janitor they finally came to the conclusion that the boiler room was not the passageway to the place where they were going.

For the first few weeks these poor little fellows held the limelight, but not for long. As soon as the sophomores had tired of testing us (yes, we were once only freshmen, too, impossible as it might seem,) we dropped back into obscurity. It was then that we realized just how unimportant freshmen really are in the general make-up of affairs.

Our sophomore year was taken up entirely with teasing the ignorant little frosh. It was hard to imagine, with all of our superior knowledge we believed we had acquired, that we could ever have been so insignificant.

By the time we were juniors we had regained the feeling that perhaps we were at least a little part in the school. Most of us had joined some club and a few were working with the league and federation.

Our class has one of the largest groups of athletes ever to graduate from North Central in one body.

Girls' tennis is represented by: Eleanor

Nelson, Betty Cook, Martha Schneider and Ella Foth.

Baseball will lose: Paul Anderson, John Sommer, Roy Henderson and Everett Henderson. These men were the main-stays in the outfield on this year's team.

Many out of this class have starred in football: Horton Herman, Everett McNew, Eugene Schatz, Roland Johnson, Phil Schmitt, Everett Henderson and Howard McNew.

For the past three years North Central has had a basketball team of championship caliber. In 1928 it was fortunate enough to win the state title. The next year it was runner-up, losing to Olympia by a very small margin. This year we again won the state championship. Senior A's who have played on these teams are: Roland Johnson, Francis Lufkin, Horton Herman and Phil Schmitt. North Central certainly owes a great deal to these four men.

Many others have received honors in their different activities outside of athletics.

During this, our last semester in high school, we were headed by: Roland Johnson, president; Phil Schmitt, vice president; Everett McNew secretary; and Francis Lufkin, treasurer.

While senior B's the following students were chosen to head the class: Cliff Freed, Adelaide De Huff, Ruth Woodruff and Clinton Gronemeier.

THIS YOUNGER GENERATION

This younger generation! What is to become of it? Time alone can tell. Older generations for centuries have been condemning the young people. Are we growing worse?

One of the oldest tablets left by ancient peoples when deciphered was an account of the escapades of the young folks. It also contained arguments which would have been proof enough that young people are "going to the dogs." So we may surmise that this policy of condemnation by older folks is not a generation old but centuries old.

Young people of today are the ones who are being preferred for positions of various sorts. Young people are the ones who hold the records for inventive skill. The younger generation down through the ages have done wonders. They have been instrumental in the work of perfecting various labor saving devices.

The young people themselves could not be the ones to acquire all these so called "bad traits." Our fathers and our mothers have handed them down to us and we are merely trying to keep up with the times.

Shall we, the condemned of today, be the condemning of tomorrow? Perhaps. After all it does seem to be human nature, doesn't it?

Four long years are about to come to an end—long years because so much has happened in them. During this time we have derived much. Some of it from books, some from associations. We have tasted victory. Yes, and we have tasted defeat. We are now ready to meet the world perhaps, or go to some college and make a name for ourselves and our school. We will probably be forgotten in a few years at North Central, but we will never forget our school. North Central seems to have become a part of us.

Four short years—short because of the good times we've had. Short because of the friendships we've made—the fun we've had.

Goodbyes will be glad—and sad. We appreciate what North Central has done for us—the opportunities it has given us. We won't say goodbye forever, just goodbye for now. We'll expect to visit. We'll do our best to make North Central proud of us—to glorify her name. Some graduates, prominent in civic affairs, are always associated with N. C. We will endeavor to be like them.

Goodbye! We'll always remember North Central! Goodbye!

IS REPUTATION SUCCESS?

No, a senior A who has always been an "A" student cannot "get by" without studying during his last semester.

The above assertion is founded upon actual experience. An "A" student believes that if he has completed three and a half years of high school maintaining throughout this entire period an average of 94 or 95 per cent, he can waste away his final semester in a riot of gaiety and gala parties without even opening a book! To some people this statement may sound absurd since any student with such a record would be led by his own judgment to maintain his scholastic average; however, such is not always the case.

These students believe that they will receive a high grade for two reasons: one is that their reputation will influence the teacher; and the other is that the teacher will grade them on what they have known.

Good advice to such students might be: remember that in later life your fellowmen will judge you by what you do, and you must continue to do until you achieve admirable recognition. That is success, and tireless energy is the key to it.

ME AND THEE

"Gimme two-bits' worth," demanded the Westerner of the Easterner, but the Easterner did not know what "two-bits" was and admitted that he didn't. Whereupon the Westerner retorted, "Where have you been all your life?"

Soon the Easterner set the other to wondering what a "six-pence" was. Thus it was proved that neither one was more intelligent than the other, but each was merely acquainted with his own colloquialisms.

A person should remember that if other people do not understand him, they may know a lot that he doesn't understand, and probably their scorn for him is as great as his for them.

If such are the conditions, a person who cannot make his statements clear or who cannot understand other peoples' statements should exert himself to broadening his knowledge instead of scorning others because they are as ignorant as he.

HAVE YOUR FLING

Everybody must have his fling some day.

It is generally thought school days are the best days of one's life. They are if used properly.

In the lower grades, students, unless unusually ambitious, think of school as a great hardship. They care little for high scholastic honors. What they want is vacation. In a high school the student likes school because of the opportunities it gives him to associate with other youths. Such association is often used to disadvantage, but generally high school students use it to a great advantage.

If social affairs are allowed to outweigh scholastic or extra curricular activities in school this association is used badly. Any student of high school age knows by his own judgment how to make the best of his time.

If enough time for play could always be allowed, it would be advisable to follow the motto, "Work first and play later" in trying to succeed. But since school days are the best days of a person's life one should always reserve time in which to "have your fling."

WHEN OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

When opportunity knocks we should take advantage of its offers.

To say that you did not know that it was your big chance that was at your doorstep is no fit excuse for its passing you by. Cultivate the art of recognizing said chances and make the best of them.

Also remember that opportunity often lurks around the corner and it is up to you to take the extra effort to locate it. It may wait around the corner until you come to claim it for your own, so look for your chance and be able to know it upon first sight.

The Red Dog

FIRST PRIZE STORY

By Edward Boyce

The soft golden prairie moon smiled mildly down on a clamorous, feverishly busy scene in the camp of the Little Otter clan of the Blackfeet. A huge council fire was sending flames high into the air. Within the circle of firelight, a ring of solemn-faced warriors squatted.

Farther back the squaws stood beating time with their hands for the wild war dance that was taking place closer by the council fire, where some one hundred or so braves leaped and whirled in mad, dizzy frenzy, keeping in time with the booming of a war drum, the clapping of the squaws, and their own shrill "Hai, Hai!"

Inside the council lodge situated in the center of a circle of tepees, all the chiefs and head men of the tribe were gathered to discuss the matter in hand, the stealing of the Red Dog.

This was the good medicine of the Blackfeet. It consisted of shiny stones from the Snake river, different herbs and the tail of a White Buffalo tied up in brightly colored wrappings of Beaver, Otter and Buffalo skins.

The peace pipe was passed around, each member blew smoke upon his hands to purify them, and then gave one puff to each of the four winds. When the pipe had gone its round, White Wolfe, a gaunt, scarred veteran of many a hard fought battle, rose to his feet, folded his arms across his broad chest and spoke in a deep sonorous tone, "Brother, thrice ten times has the sun given place to the moon since the Cheyenne dogs crept into our camp like the prairie breeze and made off with the Red Dog. Deprived of our great medicine our eyes have been blinded, our arms weakened, our arrows turned back against ourselves on the war path and our hunters returned empty handed. The gods are angry with their children, the Blackfeet. Their anger was caused by the stealing of the Red Dog, and not until it is returned to the Blackfeet Medicine Lodge will their wrath be appeased. Are we squaws that we should sit around our fires while the dogs of Cheyenne count their coups and crow about their victories over the Blackfeet? Before another sun sets let us be riding the war trail to the Cheyenne camp. I have spoken."

Grunts of approval greeted this suggestion. It was finally arranged that Red Beaver, a young chief, should lead a band of one hundred picked warriors against the Cheyennes early the next morning.

Outside, the dance had risen to a frenzied pitch, the dancers whirled and gyrated faster and faster. Now and then a brave would drop out, exhausted. The dance would continue with its weird, mad accompaniment until the last warrior had dropped.

The fire burned low in the lodge of Grey Eagle. That personage, a rugged faced, broad shouldered, deep chested young man of eighteen summers, sat with a drooping head before the glowing embers. His whole attitude and posture showed dejection, but he had reason to be dejected. Despite his successful war against the Pawnees twenty or so moons ago when every man in his war party had counted at least one coup, they had chosen Red Beaver, a warrior of much brag but few coups to lead the War Party against the Cheyennes. Grey Eagle grunted, rolled into his buffalo robes and typical of the sons of the prairies was soon lost in profound slumber.

At early dawn the war party left with much noise and shouting. All the boys who were too young to ride the war trail, but old enough to mount a horse escorted the warriors far out onto the prairie, riding around the party in circles, whooping, and shouting.

Grey Eagle remained in his lodge all that day replying in surly grunts to the questions put to him by the sharp-tongued Wahcomitah, his aunt, who kept house for him.

"Hah," she said at length with a toothless grin, "It is a girl! When a warrior will not go on the war path and sits all day long and communes with no one, he is thinking of some maiden. Is it Yellow Bird for whom you sigh?"

Grey Eagle grunted with huge disgust in the manner of one who has been accused of thinking something that was farthest from his mind—although it was a well known fact that he and Red Beaver both had designs on Yellow Bird, the comely daughter of White Wolf.

Near noon the following day a cavalcade was spied out on the prairie approaching camp. It was the returning war party, but its approach did not speak of victory, instead, dejection and defeat lay like a heavy pall over its members. In the rear of the procession were being led several horses with empty saddles or shapeless bundles on their backs. When they reached the camp Red Beaver dismounted before White Wolf, who stood in the entrance of his lodge, and reported wearily. "Oh Father, our quest was a failure. The Cheyennes had been warned of our approach and met us with warriors in number as many as the blades of grass in yon prairie. We fought with the bravery of true Blackfeet, and many Cheyennes did we send to the Sand Hills but their numbers were too many and we were swept back as the leaves before the chill autumn gales. Sixteen warriors were slain before we were finally able to draw from bow range."

When the news was brought to Grey Eagle, he received it stoically; and said to his aunt, "If they had but offered Grey Eagle the leadership of the War Party, he would have told them his plan. Only one or two warriors could get close enough to the Cheyenne camp to get the Red Dog. A large war party would soon be detected."

Late that night a figure, leading a horse, slipped away from the Blackfeet camp, and disappeared into the gloom. It was Grey Eagle attired for the War Path, in soft, beaded deerskin shirt, leggings and moccasins, a lone eagle feather thrust in his scalp lock. Across his broad back were slung a quiver of arrows and his bow. A keen edged knife and a tomahawk were thrust in his belt. Copper bracelets adorned his arms and his face was painted hideously. When he could no longer hear the shrieks and cries of the widowed squaws, he mounted his wiry little pony and struck out in a swift gallop in the direction of the Cheyenne camp.

Three times he was forced to hide and hold his horse's nose to keep him from neighing as a War Party rode by bound on some mischief or returning from some. Early dawn found him on a slope above the Cheyenne village. Smoke curled lazily up from the lodges in the still morning air. At the far end of the encampment a pack of dogs wrangled and fought. An irate squaw appeared from a neighboring lodge, and with stones and clubs soon put the yelping pack to flight. A large teepee situated near the council lodge attracted the attention of Grey Eagle. It was constructed entirely of beautifully painted White Buffalo skins. Surely a man of great importance among the Cheyennes owned this, for white buffalo were as scarce as waterholes on the dessert. Then a bundle tied to the top of the lodge poles caught his eye. He leaned forward eagerly in his excitement. It looked like it was the Red Dog! Too many times as a boy had he gazed in awe at that bundle in the medicine lodge to mistake its brightly colored wrappings of otter, beaver and buffalo skins. So great was his elation that he could scarce suppress a desire to rush down and try to make off with it. But he knew he must wait until dark, then he would have more chances for success.

All day long Grey Eagle lay in hiding, watching the nearly naked Cheyenne children play and the squaws industriously scraping skins.

At dusk the hunters returned home and soon the cooking fires gleamed. The braves stood around in groups, conversing, while the children pulled the dogs' tails and received sharp cuffs for getting in the way of the busy squaws.

When the last fire had died out and the uproar of the camp was reduced to the occasional bark of a dog, Grey Eagle rose from his bed of fragrant grass, ate sparingly of the pemmican and dried buffalo meat his aunt had given him, tightened the girth of his saddle, and bow in hand crept softly out of the grove of pine trees, leading his horse. The moon threw a soft yellow radiance over the scene and Grey Eagle breathed more easily. It was a good omen. He reached the first row of lodges safely and continued stealthily on his way to the medicine lodge in their shadows.

He wondered if the medicine man had taken down the Red Dog before night had fallen, but when he neared the white medicine lodge he saw it, still tied to the lodge pole, he

Border Buzzard

SECOND PRIZE STORY

By Robert Butz

In the shade of hangar A reclined six men. This shade was dear to the hearts of the squadron members because it was the only shade of any size in three hundred miles of blistered borderland.

These six men were not discussing the trials and tribulations of a border pilot. Each was thinking deeply. On all the faces was the mingled look of hate and sorrow. Now and then they cursed diligently, and with a deliberate choice of extremely expressive adjectives, a certain mysterious airman.

Suddenly their attention was attracted by a loud whistling of struts and flying wires. A motor roared and the air was filled with dirt and papers from a near-by refuse basket. The motor whined as it pulled the "White Hawk" skyward.

The crew on the ground watched from force of habit. Old stuff. It was only "Rusty" Wade coming in from a patrol. Well, he'd get the dressing down, not they. That was old stuff, too.

Up, up, went the white crate. Suddenly it stalled, fell off on the left wing, dropped the right one and repeated the process several times, a nice falling leaf, that. The ship again whipped skyward. It hung for a moment on its throbbing "prop" then arched into a loop, half-way completed it, rolled into an upright position and finished an Immelman turn. The nose was thrust skyward for the third time. The motor strained and pounded, then quit. The white ship slid back on its tail and the glistening "prop" whipped downward. Down in ever tightening circles spun the Hawk.

Within five hundred feet of the ground she straightened out and dropped her right wing. She slipped quickly and leveled off for a landing within three hundred feet of the hangar door. Tail still up, she raced for the hangar. Almost at the door the tail dropped, simultaneously the brakes squeaked and a mechanic pounced on its tail. The switch was cut and the motor died. The dirty faced pilot sat still and waited for the expected outburst from the office. It came without delay.

"Yuh slab sided son of a salivated sardine! What do yuh mean comin' in here like a locoed choo-choo train! Why can't yuh come on the trailer like any other civilized sky waddie? Do yuh want tuh break your fool neck?"

"Yuh can go back tuh bed any time yuh want to, pop—I want my chuck."

Rusty strode to the mess hall and hailed the group cheerfully from the doorway. He filled a goodly portion of it. His tousled head rested on a muscular neck at the base of which was a pair of broad shoulders and a deep chest supported by a thin waist. Long thin legs and narrow hips held up the whole assembly.

He received short answers instead of the hilarious welcome. Something was amiss, for the flyers were gathering around the table at attention. Colonel Wickersham walked to the third chair from the end and stood at attention. As the squadron saluted, the colonel broke the plate and turned the chair bottom up on the table.

Mist came to Rusty's eyes. His throat tightened and his stomach had a queer cold feeling. "Colonel!" he cried, "It's Stacy, my pal?" Wickersham nodded slowly. Wade drew himself up and clenched his fists. "Tell me!" he said.

Stacy, it seemed, had been found hanging head downward from his safety belt, which was tangled in one of the short straps of his chute, Stacy with a huge gash in his forehead, a snapped vertebrae, a blood clotted face.

The tousled head wagged back and forth as a stream of sizzling, crackling cuss words burst upon the smoke-filled air of the mess room. "Well, the 'Big Book' will balance soon, shore 'nuff."

A cloud of dust rolled up from the east, and from it emerged a man, under whom was a battered motorcycle. He slid to a halt in front of hangar A and dashed inside.

A few moments later Colonel Wickersham called the men to attention. He stood in front of his squadron, and waved a dispatch.

"Men," he said, "Men, I've just received a message from Major Boles, of Aguio Caliente, saying that three of his flyers have been forced out of the sky in flames and that they are fertilizing the dandelions." "Boys, there was not a single bullet hole in any of the three planes, nor in the bodies of the dispatched flyers, there is also a notation here from the 'Old Man' to the effect that 'Lily Fingers' Hanson is out of the federal prison and is somewhere on the border."

Wade glanced at his watch and noted that he had ten minutes to go over the Douglas plane given him for that patrol.

As the ship warmed up he pulled on his helmet, buckled up his chute and climbed awkwardly into his abbreviated cockpit.

He tested the controls and made himself comfortable. He advanced the throttle, hopped the chocks and roared down the field. The tail was up and his wheels spinning clear in an astonishingly short time.

At the end of the field the perfect white ship scudded into a wingover. "Rusty" swooped down over the hangar, pulled the stick toward him and screamed skyward, disappearing into the north east.

As he winged over the vast panorama of southern Texas and northern Mexico, he was buried in thought, thinking of a lost pal and of a charge account in the "Big Book."

He suddenly snapped into action at the hissing of a swiftly gliding plane. It flashed below his line of vision; but not before he saw its color, a flaming, burning, tantalizing scarlet.

Rage gripped him with icy fingers. He nosed over in pursuit. The scarlet plane was climbing rapidly. Wade threw his nose heavenward and gave her full gun. The whirlwind in front of him was pounding out the r-p-m's at a furious rate.

The scarlet plane banked sharply and raced toward him. Below it he saw a wide spread loop that glistened in the sun. It had the appearance of a medium sized rope. Yet, as it glimmered and flashed it took on a steely appearance.

Wade threw a barrage of lead in the direction of the Vulture. It had no effect. He was forced to slip quickly to avoid the on coming plane.

The scarlet plane swung onto his tail but fired no shots. As the scarlet crate followed him skyward, Rusty pulled the stick to his stomach and held his ship trembling with her nose to the sky.

Swish! Ping! The sparkling rope slapped his wing-tip. To his amazement he saw flames speed toward the center section. "Rusty" side-slipped in an attempt to extinguish the flames. This proved unsuccessful. The flames were spreading rapidly toward the reserve tank in the center section.

With a hasty glance at the altimeter, Wade prepared to leave. Seven hundred feet—he'd have to risk it. "Rusty" stood erect on the wicker seat and pulled the rip-cord. The pilot-chute snapped out and draped the full spread of silk behind it. Wade felt the harness tighten around his thighs, and then he was afloat.

* * * * *

At dawn the next morning "Rusty" looked out upon a dazzling atmosphere. He helped the mechanic roll out his own bus.

At 4:45 he taxied down the field in the clinging mud. He turned around and started the take-off. The tail came up sluggishly and he fought the controls the full length of the field before the mud yielded him up to the ozone.

He battled his way into the very center of a torrent of water. His windshield was covered with misty water and his helmet and shoulders dripped with the spray from the slip stream.

Suddenly he burst into a blaze of sunlight.

The wings of the "Hawk" sparkled like a million diamonds. Above him was a bright blue sky and a golden, shining sun; below him was a wavy mass of fleecy clouds.

He checked his course and headed into the north-east. He was flying smoothly along when he heard above the roar of his own engine the whine of a powerful, laboring motor.

Suddenly, in front of him, burst into view a scarlet plane—the scarlet plane with its beautiful curves and wonderfully arched wings. The same black helmeted figure crouched over the controls. "Rusty" gunned his crate and in an instant was on the tail of the Vulture.

Rolling, driving, climbing, twisting, turning, they fought as two angry hawks. Wade noted that the other threw his plane into maneuvers with the recklessness of a mad man. He expected to see the wings crumple at any minute.

The Vulture was on his tail. He looked back and saw the shiny loop lowered into view. "Rusty" swung into a tight loop and reversed the positions. He raked the scarlet boat from nose to tail.

A loud explosion shook the sky and part of the earth. "Rusty's" plane was thrown by the explosion. When he righted himself he saw that the air was filled with splinters and twisted metal which filtered into the clouds below.

Jazzing his motor he threw his plane into a skidding wingover.

Well satisfied with his day's work he nosed over and headed for home.

He was pondering over the identity of the scarlet flyer when he was forced to roll to the left to miss a gray shape. Above him, on his right, loomed a huge eleven passenger Ford. Its corrugated metal sides were dripping wet. All the windows were sealed with dark curtains. The instrument lights in the pilot's cockpit were off.

He drew closer to investigate. He dived across its bows and saw only the white face of the pilot.

The whole affair smacked of mystery. The pilot of the grey ghost changed his course in an effort to shake Wade. "Rusty" signalled him down with a vicious gesture. The grey ship slowly nosed over. Wade was following close behind, when his guardian angel whispered in his ear. He gunned his motor and roared skyward just in time to escape with his plane intact.

He looked over the side and saw another scarlet ship coming toward him. He threw his plane into an Immelman turn and then nosed over. Down he went—wires screaming, and struts humming. Little by little he eased the stick forward. The belt tightened across his legs.

The motor thundered and then whined protestingly. The blood flooded "Rusty's" brain. His first outside loop, but he was under the Vulture's tail. He sprayed lead through the floor boards. For a minute nothing happened. Then a control wire snapped.

"Rusty" watched the scarlet Vulture spin down in tight circles. Suddenly his throat contracted as he saw the scarlet plane pass over the gray transport. The wide-spread loop settled over the tail assembly of the huge ghost.

To his horror Wade discerned a blue flame eat the metal surface of the tail gear. The controls of the huge plane were useless.

As the Ford started to fall Wade perceived a white spread of silk billow out from the transport. A moment later a figure was swinging pendulum like below it.

"Rusty" set his ship down close to the wreckage. He cut his switches and ran toward the man of the chute who had already landed.

As Wade advanced he saw that his enemy was hopelessly tangled in the ratlines of his chute. The fallen airman struggled to reach the heavy gun at his hip. "Rusty" pounced upon him like a hungry tiger. Simultaneously a right cracked to the jaw and a left crashed into the short ribs of the outlaw. With the handy ratlines Wade bound the man snugly and propped him against the tail of his plane.

Then "Rusty" took in a few details. At the left was a huge mass of metal. At his right was a scarlet plane standing on its nose. At various other places the scenery was dotted with a goodly portion of the excess population of China.

"Rusty" walked over and examined the scarlet plane. It contained a complicated radio apparatus of which he knew nothing. Its pilot was a dummy.

He found a section of the rope loop. It was composed of small, but exceedingly strong copper wire and a chain of small glass capsules.

Wade broke one of these and found that it contained a highly inflammable liquid which could not be daunted by mere metal. This liquid was lighted by contact with an electrically charged copper wire.

Wade looked at his sullen captive and smiled grimly. He lifted his vanquished foe into the plane. Settling himself comfortably, he climbed for home.

Reaching the field he gave his usual home-coming exhibition, much to the discomfiture of his bound captive. As he sat down on the home tamarack, he heaved a sigh of relief.

"Well, Lily Fingers," he muttered as he cut the switches, "one more charge account paid in full."

The Story of the Tamarack

THIRD PRIZE STORY

By Bill Nolan

Many, many, moons ago before you and I were even born, the Indians kept a record of many of the brave deeds. They would read them once a year, and then everyone could see what a victorious year the tribe had had. They always drew pictures in the sand to show of their brave achievements and victories. Sometimes there were fearful rain storms that would blot out these pictures. Then the brave deeds would be forgotten.

Tokea, a son of a famous Indian chieftain, started out on a long journey; for, in order to become a famous warrior, one must first prove himself strong and courageous, and show his cleverness in outwitting the enemy. Tokea wandered about the forests and on the plains for many days, always trying to find some way to show his bravery.

One day in his wanderings he chanced upon a beautiful Indian maiden. She was lost, and from her dress Tokea saw that she came from one of his people's most hated enemies. She appeared so beautiful in his eyes that he forgot about her being an enemy to his people. He started back with her to her tribe; but before they arrived at the camp, he was deeply in love with the maiden. They decided to run away together. They went far away into the hills where Tokea built a beautiful wigwam for his wife, whom he called Bright Eyes. For many moons they stayed in the mountains. They were very happy in their home. Then one day Tokea returning from a hunting trip found a little baby cuddled in the arms of Bright Eyes. Then he drew a picture of a small baby on a tree. There were many pictures of brave deeds on the tree. It showed the picture of a bear that he had killed. But the picture of the baby he put above them all because someday he would be a great chieftain.

One day a hunting party of five Indians stumbled upon Tokea's home while he was out looking for some dry birch bark. They noticed his wife, Bright Eyes, and grasping hold of her tried to carry her off. Tokea, hearing her screams, hurried to her rescue. In a fury he dashed upon them. Swinging his hatchet, he killed the leader of the party. He turned upon the rest of the party with frightful cries. Terrified by the appearance of this madman, they took to their heels. They returned home with the story of the wildman who had killed their leader up in the hills. This incident also went down on the tree.

Then came many happy days, for now he had a son whom he taught to shoot and to throw a spear. Bright Eyes was happy, and sang as she did the daily tasks around the wigwam. Once in a while she would be sad, and wonder how her tribe was, and what her people were doing. One day, when explaining her trouble to Tokea, she told him that their son should have other little children to play with and that she should see some of her own people. It was decided that they should go back to her tribe.

After many days they found her tribe, but instead of meeting them with shouts of gladness her people drove them away. Tokea and his wife and their son went in search of his tribe. His tribe greeted him with open arms, but they took some time to get used to the presence of a woman from a different tribe. Tokea's son soon learned the games that he had been told about by his father, who had left his tribe so many years ago. Now again Tokea and his family were contented.

His people did not believe all the stories that Tokea told them of his past adventures. So one beautiful day Tokea with his family and some of the great men of the tribe went back into the hills where he and his family had lived. The men saw upon the tree the account of the great deeds that he had done. They planned a great festival of celebration, and named this tree a Tamarack because of its ability to withstand the rain and snow.

Everyone in the tribe came to partake in the joyous gathering. The next day after this celebration it was learned that their old enemy was approaching. They immediately formed a semi-circle in the woods each Indian hiding behind some tree or shrub in order that the enemy might not see them. The foes walked right into the trap, and the braves that were lead by Tokea routed their old enemies. The next day was a day for rejoicing, and ever since that time they have always had a big pow wow before a battle. They always won. After winning such a combat as this, they printed it on the Tamarack. Even to this day you will find a Tamarack in every Indian's home.

Spired towers, casements, bowers,
Wrought with skillful artistry;
Each flame's rim of vivid hue
Casting spells of witchery;
You hold visions of the past,
Old regimes that did not last;
While above, prehensile ways
Mingle here with ours in haze.

Living color, framed by duller
Shadows studding brick mosaic;
Are those fragments flung-up segments
From the times we call archaic?
Are they scenes you once illumed,
Or you hungrily consumed?
Might they be remembered things
You have seen in wanderings?

Orange-clothed fire,
Leaping higher, higher,
What is your refrain?

Orange-clothed fire,
Leaping higher, higher,
Sing us your refrain.

INDIAN PIPES

SECOND PRIZE POEM

By Eleanor Kennedy

Revealed against the dull green moss
Beneath the massive cedar tree
I found a group of pastel pipes—
Symbols of Indian fantasies.

Straight waxy stems and flushed cups
An Indian maiden's soul enclose.
The spirit of a native race
Preserved there in prolonged repose.

MY WINTER GARDEN

THIRD PRIZE POEM

By Hazel Stansbury

Black traceries against the white;
Bleak mockeries of past delight;
Desolate 'neath wintry skies,
My garden lies.

Yet from past times we know
That under dreary wastes of snow,
From drabbest capsule, tiny size,
Sheer beauty shall arise.

Winged strangers call no more;
Unused their house with open door;
With shrieking wind, a place of sighs,
My garden lies.

Will not the God of buds and leaves
Guard us as he hath guarded these?
Though it all signs of life denies,
My garden shall arise.

Debaters

Debates that have always aroused much interest and enthusiasm in North Central are the junior and senior Ahlquist debates. These debates are sponsored by the Drs. T. M. and R. E. Ahlquist each spring. One hundred dollars in cash is awarded to the winners. Three prizes are given in the junior group and three in the senior group.

SENIOR AHLQUIST DEBATE

The senior Ahlquist debate was held on April 22. Six students composed the teams. Those on the negative were: Alice Perkins, Myrtle Meadows and Dick McLane. The affirmative was upheld by Elsie Meyer, Russell Potter and Fred Lawson. The question debated was "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the policy of free trade."

This group is composed of students who have had previous experience by either being a member of the interscholastic team or a winner in a past Ahlquist debate.

Myrtle Meadows won first place in the debate on April 22. Russell Potter took second and Dick McLane, third.

The negative team won the decision.

The junior group is composed of students in high school who have had no previous experience in debate. Over fifty students turned out for this group. The same question was debated as in the senior group. Those composing it were: Lucille Engdahl, Bill Melson, Phil Walborn, Doris Yeager, Carolyn Rude and Mel Graves. Edith Mincey was selected as an alternate.

S. A. R. ORATORICAL CONTEST

The S. A. R. contest held in North Central on February 12 was won by Dick McLane, 12A. His topic was on "George Washington and his part in the Constitutional Convention."

On February 22 he delivered his speech before the Sons of the American Revolution at their banquet in honor of the birthday of Washington.

NATIONAL ORATORICAL CONTEST

Each year the Seattle Times sponsors an oratorical contest. Students of all the high schools in the United States under eighteen are eligible.

Vernon Boland, 12A, was selected as the winner at North Central. His subject was on "The Constitutionality of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Since the North Central News always supports school activities and organizations, it has done a great deal for the entire student body.

This year The News has backed oratorical and English contests sponsored by outside papers and magazines. It has co-operated with the Community Chest authorities by printing articles and pictures designed to help raise funds.

P. T. C. meetings have been featured in an effort to bring school and parents into closer contact. The tinfoil campaign to aid crippled children has been a feature both this year and last.

One reporter worked overtime in securing publicity for the bond issue providing a new Hillyard high school. Special interviews with celebrities who visited Spokane or North Cen-

These foregoing things, besides publicity given to all school activities, including editorial campaign against smoking and poor conduct in and about school, have helped to make
The News bigger and better than ever before.

WHY WE SHOULD STUDY HISTORY

We study the history of the past in order that we may have a better understanding of the present day. We learn to value the contributions which have come down to us and to realize the duty of developing our best to hand down to others. By studying the past we avoid its mistakes.

Until recent times the kingdom was the accepted form of government. Rome tried a republic but was not ready for it. History tells us the reason—that in order to have a republic the majority of its people must be wise and good. So we know that our United States of America will succeed in so far as each of us does his best.

Throughout the past there have been countless wars for conquest. History teaches that as a result each nation suffered. Our age is trying to bring about the destruction of war. The London conference may not succeed, but the idea will be handed down for future people to make real.

So let us study History for its many valuable lessons. In addition shall we not read it for the pleasure it brings to us personally? But we cannot get this pleasure for nothing. We must put into our study attention and faithfulness and thought. Then History will open for each of us the inspiration of its pages.

ADVANTAGES OF ENGLISH

Long ago, there was a textbook on English called "Our Mother Tongue." No matter how dull any of the contents proved to be, always the title was alluring. Our mother tongue—after all, it is the keynote to all of our thinking, all of our talking, all of our every day life.

"But if we could just 'get' English!" you exclaim. "If we didn't have to learn rules and write themes!" Do you think Paderewski just "got" music? Do you think there was no running up the scales on his part? No time spent upon disagreeable drills in technique? Is anything worth while achieved without adhering to habit for a long while to make the achievement possible?

English is an open sesame to most of your other studies. It attempts to teach you to pick out the main thought from all reading matter and to grasp that thought. Without such ability of what value would a history lesson be to you? If the words do not convey a meaning that will create images, what appreciation can you have of colonial times? Of the sailing of Columbus under hardships scarcely endurable? Your vocabulary instruction, put to service can let you see before you Wordsworth's "host of golden daffodils," can let you hear clearly Shelley's immortal lark. Surely, your study of outlining in English can help you distinguish the high lights in any type of reading. Your work in debating if you are willing to apply it, has shown you that in any subject (say Civics) you must support a statement with sufficient reasons. Undoubtedly, the letter writing you have done is helping you to pass thoughts on to some absent friend, to know the value of good form, to respect courtesy in business. And to know how to employ our mother tongue in letter writing, as well as in talking, is something insisted upon in the business world of today. A knowledge of all these things can help you in what ways as far as your North Central News, for instance, is concerned? The need of such knowledge, on the part of anyone desiring to enter a News class, is summed up in the major requirement for entrance: "excellent work previously done in English."

But the above applications have had to do mostly with school. What about English when you leave North Central? Is it going to be called a "falsely cultural" subject—one not really serviceable? The "talkies," the radio, your conversation, the newspaper, not to mention countless other agencies, will offer an answer.

The "talkies," we are told, are insisting upon a future foundation in English: a correct pronunciation, an excellent enunciation, and the power to interpret. Because some of the legitimate stage actors already possess these qualifications, they have usurped many a place from persons of mere screen fame.

Graham McNamee, widely known in the radio world, advises prospective radio announcers to major in certain phrases of English work.

As far as our conversation goes, we all like to think back on the good fairy whose words fell from her mouth like jewels. Although this idea is most fanciful, it is well, at least, for us to believe that to use good English when talking with our friends is somewhat akin to employing our best table manners when eating with them.

In regard to the newspapers, we have been accused of having them written for the mind of a ten-year-old child. Does such a condition exist partially because we cannot understand our mother tongue beyond that point?

WHY WE SHOULD STUDY SCIENCE

All human beings are naturally curious and more or less observant of the things about them. The more intelligent they are the more they wish to know the "why" of everything. Even before the dawn of history man was inquiring about or seeking answers to puzzling phenomena. At the present time the word Science embodies the great fund of accumulated "whys" and "hows" thoroughly proved and organized. Modern civilization is often referred to as the "Age of Science." To intelligently understand present day civilization or life a high school student should acquaint himself with this vast field of human knowledge.

The subject of Chemistry deals with the composition of all matter and explains many physical and biological problems. Physics deals with the construction and laws of mach-

WHY SHOULD WE STUDY A FOREIGN LANGUAGE?

The cultured man of several generations ago found it necessary as part of his cultured background to have a knowledge of foreign language. In fact he was not considered cultured unless he possessed this mental equipment.

Today, in a more practical age, the emphasis on this "cultured" training is not strong, yet the need to know foreign language is as great as ever.

We are living in a world very different from Taking these previous statements into earnest consideration, do you not believe that English is, indeed, your most basic subject? That it can open up new fields for you? That it can help you, if you are willing, to know the "joys of the intellect?" That it can be a mark of your culture and in so being can add to your personality? That it can help you with the most practical, every day things of life; that it can carry you to the land of make-believe? That it can make you better appreciate other subjects taught; better understand other languages learned?

ines and physical phenomena generally. Biology deals with living things and the natural laws that govern them. It introduces the student to the great out-of-doors and to an aesthetic appreciation of Nature. Geology deals with the earth, its composition and history. Astronomy is concerned with the stars.

A knowledge of the fundamentals of science is necessary in order to understand new inventions such as radio, the airplane, and the workings of a motor car. Current literature, magazines, and newspapers are full of scientific references. Science not only explains things and acquaints you with Nature but it also opens the door for special interests or hobbies which are necessary in life to establish the sane use of leisure time. No person is therefore properly educated unless he has at least an elementary scientific background.

the age of our grandfather—an age of radio, of the airplane, of the steamship, of telephones and telegraph transmission. Modern invention has brought the world together and we cannot go our way alone—we have need of each other.

America is rapidly assuming the leadership in international politics. Industry is dependent upon foreign raw materials and upon foreign markets.

An unusual feature this year was the presentation of the curtain raiser, "The Case of Suspension," being used for the first time in North Central. The double casts for both plays are as follows:

North Central Band

The Band

The North Central Band offers musical training to 110 boys who play wind instruments. The major organization, or full band is divided into smaller units for the purpose of intensive work. The junior band gives opportunity to boys with little experience; the concert band holds the interest of the more finished players; the saxophone septet and brass quartet represent the organization when a small group is required; and the pep band answers the call for popular music.

The band and its auxiliary units make from 50 to 75 appearances each year, including parades, stunts, games, banquets, broadcasting and concerts. The semi-annual concerts are presented both as ensemble projects and as a means of raising funds.

Those who rank as bandmaster are: Richard Ireland, Herbert Slate, and Dave Slee. Maurice Persons is the business manager, and Clinton Gronemeier is his assistant. Harley Reckord is equipment manager and Frederick Uhden is his assistant. Earl McCarthy and Elwyn Armstrong are librarians. Bill Nolan is drum major.

One of the oldest enterprises in school and one of the most beneficial to North Central is the orchestra. Too much credit can not be given to it for its part in all activities.

C. Olin Rice deserves the hearty applause of every North Central student for his work with the orchestra, which is ready to play whenever it is asked.

WHY SHOULD WE STUDY FOREIGN LANGUAGES?

Great business opportunities lie at our very doors and business points the way to languages.

Study languages then for business reasons, for political reasons, to cultivate an understanding of our neighbors which will bring about a sympathy for them and their problems, which are our problems, too, and will be more so as time goes on.

Students interested in science, in music, in art, in literature have always studied and should continue to acquire language. Much that is pertinent in the field of scientific research cannot be found in translation, so one must wait years before it appears. To reap the benefits in the field of foreign endeavor in the scientific world, one must be able to read the works in the original.

People who travel should know foreign languages. The knowledge is essential in order to gain the greatest pleasure and benefits from a trip abroad. To know what goes on about you, to be able to communicate with those one sees and meets is one of the greatest joys of traveling. Furthermore it is decided financial asset; it saves one money and grief.

Then, last but very important, is the pleasure and profit that one may derive in being able to read the best in world literature and read it in the original, since translation, no matter how good, can never equal the original.

VALUE OF MATHEMATICS

The chief aim of education seems to be the most complete development of the powers of the student—the power to think and do. Gaining facts is only one of the instruments used to develop the power.

In what way is mathematics fitted to bear part in the process?

The practical value of mathematics is enormous when we consider that mathematics has been the pioneer and insures the results in these days of iron, steam and electricity.

It might be contended that to a vast majority of people the value of mathematics is indirect. We might ask: "What subject taught is any more direct?" For direct, practical usefulness, mathematics seems to be second only to the mother tongue. The elements of English are in constant use, the elements of mathematics are in occasional use and such also is true of other subjects. It is true that a person in business rarely would need to know how to solve a quadratic equation; similarly it would be hard to imagine one's needing the ability to scan hexameters or to name the parts of a flower.

A subject is also valuable as a preparation for the probability that the child in the future may take up an occupation requiring a knowledge of the subject in question. For mathematics this value is marked, because there is a large and growing number of occupations which require knowledge of mathematical results.

Besides the practical values, both certain and probable mathematics has value on the information it imparts. In whatever civilization mathematics may be found it is always of the same character. One nation did not discover that 2 times 5 equals 10 and another that 2 times 5 equals 11.

So completely is nature mathematical that some of the more exact natural sciences as astronomy and physics are in part largely mathematical. Other sciences are drifting to the mathematical truths.

The facts of mathematics, important and valuable as they are, are not the strongest reason for the study of the subject by all pupils. It is the best subject to train in certain modes of thought.

One of these modes is the ability to grasp a situation, to seize the facts and perceive correctly the state of affairs. The business man must constantly reckon with attempts to mislead him. He must learn the facts if he can, not only without assistance but in spite of active opposition. Mathematics is especially adapted to the beginning of the practice.

Conclusions which must be made every day are often of complicated nature and are difficult to determine. It is justly demanded that the school familiarize students with a mode of thought which is facing us every day. Mathematics possess this power far more than any other subject. The characteristics of such a subject should be that the student can be certain of himself and know when he is right. There is one, but only one branch of study which can claim certainty—mathematics. It is also simple enough in the beginning and proceeds step by step to more elaborate thinking. Then, the conclusions obtained are applicable.

YES, WE SHOULD STUDY ART

Many are the advantages of taking fine arts. Among the first of these is the development of appreciation of the beautiful. We learn to appreciate the glory of the arts such as sculpture, china painting and design. We learn to love the natural beauty of the out-of-doors.

Secondly we study the fine arts in order to cultivate accuracy of observation. Oftentimes we think that it would be quite an easy undertaking to draw something that we see every day and that seems very simple. If we attempt it, we realize that no matter how many times we have observed the object, it is quite necessary for us to examine it carefully before we may make a picture of it.

Possibly one of the most important advantages of a fine arts course is the development

Each must know the shorthand of the formula, the meaning of a simple graph, of a simple equation, and of a negative number or else must feel the stigma of ignorance of the common things that the educated world talks about and reads about.

A type of thought so essentially characteristic of the human mind so little influenced by environment, so uniformly present in every civilization is one of which no well informed mind today can be ignorant.

of creative ability that it brings out. We may produce beautiful designs from the pattern of a mere daisy or we may make something lovely by using the ellipses of various bowls. Again we find that training in artistic work stimulates the imagination and promotes enjoyment of life as well as the worthy use of leisure time. After studying art we may visit a museum and learn more about things there than we would have been able to had we been deprived of the privileges of the art course. We may like the statues and paintings if we learn to weave a story of our own about them.

Three other things that we derive from such a study are that it increases interest in the commonplace things, that it reveals the natural ability and it lays a foundation for an art career in painting, sculpture or design.

mounted his horse so that he might get it easily and was just forcing his mount closer to grasp the object of his quest when a dog trotted around the lodge, saw him and howled loudly. Grey Eagle's horse plunged away nearly unseating him. By the time he had his frightened pony under control again, the other dogs in the immediate vicinity had seen him, and were barking viciously. Soon the camp was in an uproar. Grey Eagle realized that he must make haste or else his enterprise would be lost. He kicked his pony into a gallop, and as he passed the medicine lodge, stood up in his stirrups and tore the Red Dog from its lodge pole. Then with a shrill war-whoop he rode madly back the way he had come. Behind him he heard the hubbub of the camp and in the roar of anger that went up when the Red Dog was founding missing. He put his pony to a swift run and soon the clamor of the Cheyenne camp was far behind.

The sun was just appearing over the horizon when Grey Eagle and his jaded pony plodded into the Blackfeet camp. He dismounted before the medicine lodge with his precious burden and called loudly to the Buffalo Man, the medicine man of the tribe. When he appeared, Grey Eagle handed him the Red Dog and said,

"Oh Buffalo Man, let the Blackfeet rejoice once again the Red Dog reposes in the Blackfeet medicine lodge."

Then, glancing neither to the right nor to the left, he strode majestically to his lodge.

All that day presents were given to Grey Eagle. Even horses were presented. Then to top it all off, White Wolf offered him the hand of Yellow Bird in marriage.

The happiness of Grey Eagle was complete. The gods, indeed, had been good to him.

Mr. Prague was quietly reading the paper when he heard a large yowling from the rear of the house. Little Stanley burst into the room with tears streaming down his face. "Why, what's the matter, son," inquired Papa Prague.

"Oh, I've just had a terrible scene with your wife."

The dying millionaire wasn't so proud of his life and feared the hereafter. He asked the visiting clergyman if a hundred thousand dollar present to the church would insure his salvation.

"I'm not sure" said the clergyman, "but it's worth trying."

DELTA CLUB

The purpose of the Delta club is to foster and promote all school activities, to aid in the development of spirit in North Central, and to support the playfield in every way.

During the past semester the club has been particularly active. An honor award was given the most valuable player on the football team and a large plague was presented to the winning team in inter-class basketball.

The annual Delta Hi-Jinx, presented March 28 and 29, was a great success.

All Delts have been prominent in some line of extracurricular activity, as this is one of the main requirements for admittance to the club.

La Tertulia, a Spanish word meaning social gathering, is a club organized by Miss Edith Broomhall in 1918. Miss J. Adelle Hermann is now the director. The aim of the club is to encourage the study and use of Spanish among the students.

This semester, the club members have continued studying the South American countries and have enjoyed it.

The club meets the third Tuesday in each month and has two social meetings each semester.

The membership consists of the presiding officers of all the student organizations, with the librarian, Miss Bacon, as faculty advisor.

The first project of the Presidents' Council was cooperating with the North Central library. A convocation given Tuesday, March 18, showed the necessity and importance of returning books. All members of the Council participated in the convocation.

GRUB STREET

Grub Street, the boys' literary society, was formed from the Indian club in 1927.

The constitution then adopted was one of an older organization by the same name. It provided for installing officers by a system of point awards for literary work.

The name of the club was taken from a famous old street in the London slums called Grub Street, where many of England's best authors lived at one time, and where much of the world's finest literature has been written.

Recently another constitution was adopted. It provides for election of officers by ballot. Also by this latest constitution club membership is limited to twenty. The chief requirements are that the applicants be neither a senior A nor a 9B, and that a satisfactory essay, short story or poem be submitted.

The organization takes part in many different activities, the chief one being the annual banquet of the associated high school literary clubs of the city.

RADIO CLUB

In 1921 a group of enthusiastic boys who were interested in radio organized for the purpose of promoting a general interest along radio lines.

Since that time the Radio club has been busy continually in undertaking and developing many radio projects. Under the direction of A. L. Smith the club installed a spark transmitter and a great deal of radio exchange was carried on under the call letters of TYL.

Through the efforts of the Radio club the good name of North Central was spread throughout the west and northwest through radio station KPFO.

For the past year the Radio club has been interested in short wave reception and transmission. The club built a fifty watt transmitter, a well filtered power supply and a three tube Schnell circuit short wave receiver. With this equipment exchanges with stations as far away as Australia should be possible.

Student Conduct Board

The object of the student conduct board is to govern the conduct of students in the library, convocations and in the halls of North Central.

There are five members on the board. President, secretary, library commissioner, convocation commissioner and traffic commissioner. These offices are filled by students appointed by the president of Associated Student Councils, the Girls' League and the Boys' Federation in consultation with the faculty advisors of the organizations. These appointments need the approval of the Associated Student Councils.

The conduct board passes sentences on offenders of the school conduct rules. A meeting of the board is held every Monday morning in room 126. Any student who wishes may appeal his case for disorderly conduct before the board at any of these meetings. Sentence is given according to the importance of the offense and the number of times committed. The sentence consists in being expelled from library and convocations for a certain length of time.

The members for this year were:

Secretary	Edith Mitze
Library Commissioner ..	Catherine Dittebrandt
Convocation Commissioner	Howard McNew
Traffic Commissioner	Paul Anderson

SANS SOUCI

The French club was organized in 1913, and Sans Souci, which literally means "without care," was adopted as the official name for the club.

The purpose of the club is to promote further interest about France among the students of the school. Several plays have been given in French at the meetings.

The members are selected from those pupils who have two final grades of "C" or better or who have completed four semesters of French. Until this semester the club has been made up of both boys and girls, but the club has now voted its membership to girls.

The French club has either presented the language department of the school with some useful article each year, or has helped in some other way.

The Amphion Society was first organized in North Central several years ago by Mr. Rice, musical director. The society was, however, reorganized during the spring term of 1930.

The Amphion Society is purely a musical society open to all who have musical ability, and is not a mere social function. To be eligible one must be talented in some musical line. The only requirement for those wishing to join is that they appear before the Society for tryout, and show enough ability to give a solo in public—not more than 30 in the society. Its purpose is to prepare its members for programs to be given by the society both outside and in school.

The S. P. Q. R. club was organized in 1914 by Miss Evans for the purpose of getting together the students interested in the study of Latin and Roman history.

The letters S. P. Q. R. stand for the Latin words Senatus Populusque Romanus, which means the Senate and the Roman people.

At each meeting of the club, reports on customs and peculiar habits of the Roman people are given.

The Latin club has put on a number of Latin plays, has broadcast over KFIO and has had a concession at every Pow Wow. It has contributed to the playfield at various times and every Christmas it helps some needy family.

The Girls' League of North Central high school was organized, according to its constitution, "to develop through cooperative activities involving every girl, a broad group of sympathy and fellowship, and an active loyalty to the highest interests of the school, the community and the nation." All girls enrolled in school are members.

The Central Council is the executive body of the League. MATHEMATICS CLUB

The Mathematics club was organized in the spring of 1913 at North Central to promote and interest students in mathematical subjects. The algebra contest in the fall and the geometry contest in the spring are conducted by the club. Silver loving cups are presented to the winners in each contest and their names are engraved on the plaque in the trophy case. This spring the club is sponsoring also a junior algebra contest for algebra 1 and 2 students. This will be an annual contest.

Those who have three B's or better in mathematics are eligible to membership in the club. The Lewis and Clark and North Central Math clubs alternate every year in entertaining each other.

The Mathematics club always takes an active part in school activities and supports enterprises. In the annual Pow Wow the Math club conducts the pop corn stand.

THEATRE MASQUE

The Masque club was formed as a literary society in May, 1910. In 1911, because of the joint high school, no clubs were organized and the Masque club met at the homes of the members. During the year of 1912, the members decided to take up a dramatic line of work as well as literary. It was then that the name Masque was adopted by the club.

In September, 1929, the members adopted a new constitution which changed the name to Theatre Masque.

No regular tryouts are held for new members. The faculty director who is the dramatics instructor will, as she finds talent among her students, recommend them for membership in the club. If they meet with the approval of a majority of the members they are admitted as members.

The right is given the faculty director to expell any member from the club if he fails to cooperate with others in the activities which the club participates in.

This semester several plays and skits have been given at group meetings of the dramatics classes. A convocation for the benefit of the playfield was presented by the members of the club.

About twenty-seven members of the club have been taking a complete ground school course given by Seargent J. E. Dean.

The club sponsored a flying contest on the prairies near Fairmont cemetery. As usual the members of the club will hold their annual model airplane contest at Felts Field.

One of the club's achievements this semester has been the constructing of an "Air-Marking" sign on the roof of the school building.

Originally the Scriptorian Society was a club for both boys and girls interested in writing. Now, however, the membership is limited to twenty-five girls, but the requirements are the same. Any girl having four B's or better in English may submit an original story, poem or essay which is graded by a committee of judges. Those ranking highest are admitted.

At each meeting the club has a program of original stories, poems and essays. Serials and plays have also been tried at different times. This semester the members are writing different types of composition.

Each year the club has had a successful booth at the Pow Wow, where they sell noise makers. Twice the News campaign has been successfully handled by the club.

In 1914 Miss Gibson, Girls' League adviser at that time, organized the Vox Puellarum as a debating society. Later the club was modeled as a literary organization and conducted contests to promote literature and writing.

Last semester the constitution of the club was again revised to sponsor any worthwhile school activity and to develop the talents of each individual girl. The club takes care of some needy family at Christmas, and each year the Vox awards ten dollars to a senior girl who has overcome obstacles and has been prominent in her classes in scholarship. Each year Vox presents a Vodvil, the proceeds of which go to the playfield.

Membership of the club is restricted to thirty members who are admitted by competitive examination and who must have a passing grade in at least four subjects.

Banking Officers

OFFICERS

President Raymond Miles Director A. O. Strieter

Officers of the banking association are chosen from the first period office training class. The president is chosen according to the work he has done the previous semester in the association. His duties are numerous, for he has charge of distributing all supplies and making reports. On Tuesday he works all day on the banking, and every other day he spends part of his time attending to it.

The head cashiers do the main checking of accounts, while the assistants take care of the money and slips. Every slip must be re-checked before it goes to the bank.

While their service to the school is great, the officers also gain for themselves actual experience that will be helpful to them in the business world.

This year saw one of the most successful basketball teams that has ever carried the Red and Black colors.

Only three times during the season did the team meet defeat. With a good nucleus back, "Red" Reese built a state championship team.

Three North Central players placed on the all-city team: Roland Johnson, Horton Herman, and Phil Schmitt. Bill Shaw was the only Northsider to place on the second all-city lineup.

North Central's 1929-30 basketball team swept through to undisputed right to the title "state champions."

After winning every game in the city race, the team traveled to Seattle where they defeated Naches, Centralia, Foster, and Walla Walla.

During the whole season, the team lost only three games, losing two of these to college frosh teams.

OTIS ORCHARD

Otis Orchard was the first team met and defeated by the powerful North Central quintet this season. Coach Reese used a great number of players in this game; yet the Indians won by a large score, 49-20.

SPANGLE

After conquering the Otis five the team traveled to Spangle where the Red and Black players again showed their powers by winning easily, 29-9.

MONTANA TRIP

During the Christmas holidays, the team took a trip to Montana where they played one game with Libby high school and two with Whitefish high school. Libby high, the first team played in Montana, fell easily before the onslaught of the North Central five, 27-7.

At Whitefish the team was defeated by the only high school team during the regular season. The first game was played in the afternoon, and the Red and Black players seemed able to guard the Whitefish boys in this game while breaking through themselves to win, 20-16. The evening game was one of a different nature, for the Whitefish boys came back determined to win. The best that the Indians could do was to keep the score close, it seemed, for the Monana boys won 13-11.

W. S. C. FROSH

On their return from the Montana trip, the team went to Pullman where they battled one of the strongest teams on the coast. Although the frosh won, the boys from the high school gave a good account of themselves. After the smoke of the game had cleared away, the frosh were leading, 33-21.

CITY SERIES

Seeming charged with a desire to avenge their two defeats, the team returned to Spokane where they made a clean sweep of the city series.

Gonzaga did not seem able to get going this year; and consequently did not furnish much competition. The first game with the Irish was slow with the end never in doubt. The end of the fourth quarter found the Bullpups trailing a 32-6 score.

In the second game, the Bullpups proved as uneffective as in the first game. The Indians won this game by a score of 33-8. This game was also marked by the fact that the Gonzaga team was so closely guarded that they failed to make a field goal until late in the fourth quarter.

North Central's two game series with Hillyard proved no more exciting than the games of the Gonzaga series. Hillyard lost the first game 5-24 and the second 7-33.

As usual the Tigers gave North Central the best fight, and twice the Lewis and Clark squad came near to beating the North Siders. The Tiger team started the first game off with a bang, and kept the score in doubt until the last part of the fourth quarter when Roland Johnson shot a basket to cinch the game. The final score was 19-17.

Lewis and Clark came to the north side gym for the second battle, but the Indians fought too hard for the Tigers and took the game 26-15.

Everyone expected the Tiger tribe to give a stiff battle in the third game, and the Tigers certainly lived up to the expectations of the people. Determined to win at any cost, the South Siders fought every bit of the way, but in the last part of the game they became too excited and made a number of fouls which cost them the game. Horton Herman's wonderful shooting of free throws helped the count which ended 19-16.

IDAHO FROSH

In preparation for the state tournament, the team went to Moscow where they played the Idaho frosh team. The Red and Black team led nearly the whole game only to lose it in the last few minutes of the game. Idaho won by the close score of 22-20.

STATE TOURNAMENT

The North Central quintet played its first game at nine o'clock against Naches and won by the score 26-11.

At eight o'clock the next morning, the Red and Black team met and defeated Centralia 17-13.

Foster threw a big scare into the team by leading 12-11 at the half, but the Indians seem to hit their stride in the second half and won 28-14.

The championship tilt Saturday night, March 15, was the most exciting game of the series.

At the end of the first quarter the Walla Walla team led 5-4, but in the second quarter the Indians came through to score enough points to end the half 16-8.

Faced by almost certain defeat, the Walla Walla quintet took the Indians by surprise and tied the score before the Red and Black team found its stride again. The lead saw-sawed between the two teams until late in the final quarter when the Indian five took the lead and the game by a score of 29-25.

Basketball Players

ROLAND JOHNSON

One of the best basketball players in the state of Washington is Roland Johnson, North Central center. He has played in three state tournaments for the Red and Black. This year he was unanimously chosen for the position of all-city center. North Central is very fortunate in having such a good scorer and floor man as Roland who led the individual scoring column this season in the city race.

HORTON HERMAN

Horton was given a place on the all-city selection this year because of his scoring ability and his guarding ability. Horton is another player in whom the Red and Black can place glory and in whom North Central can be proud of as a player. In three different tournaments at Seattle, Horton has been a very prominent figure. His playing this year was very good.

JOE BEESON

Joe is a new man around school, but he is certainly making himself known by his athletic prowess. Joe went to the state tournament this year and gave a very good account of himself. His shooting ability has been one of the main factors in his playing.

PHIL SCHMITT

Phil is regarded as one of the best basketball guards in the city, and because of his defensive playing was awarded a place on the first all-city team. Phil is another one of the Red and Black players who has been in three state tournaments. Phil often proved valuable in the city race by his close checking in a tight place and by his stellar work in breaking away to score.

BILL SHAW

Bill is another three year veteran who was placed on one of the all-city teams. He was chosen for a place on the second all-city team because of his scoring ability and his clever floor work.

At the state meet, Bill showed the real spirit that was in him in the last part of the championship game with Walla Walla. In this game, Bill came through with score after score to help place the Indians in the lead.

FRANCIS LUFKIN

Francis has had some very tough breaks in his basketball career at North Central. He was cheated out of his chance to become a player at this year's state tournament mix by illness. Although Francis failed to make an all city rating, he did show up very well in the city race with his long shots. In the second Lewis and Clark game his eye was especially good.

BILL BRUBAKER

Bill is a last year veteran who certainly showed up well this year. Bill received a great deal of praise for his playing at the tournament this season. In the city race, he was a particularly hard man to guard because of his clever floor work. In the third Lewis and Clark game, Bill was one of the shining lights with his scoring.

ROY HENDERSON

Roy is a new man on the squad this year, but he has certainly played a good brand of basketball. He has seen service in many of the games this year including some of the games at the tournament. Many times Roy has come through with a point when it was necessary.

"RED" WALSH

"Red" is one of the boys that Coach Reese will have to form next year's material from. Although "Red" did not see much service in the tournament, he was ready and will get a chance to show his "stuff" next year. Whenever Roland was taken out, Coach Reese usually let Walsh play center.

MELVIN GULLIDGE

Melvin was one of the boys on the squad last year, and he went to the state meet this season. Melvin is a very good man and next year he should be one of the strong mainstays of the team. The service that Melvin saw in the city race showed that he can play a good brand of ball.

NORMAN COONEY

Norman Cooney was the hard working manager of the championship basketball team this year. Norman didn't come in for much of the glory, but he did come in for a great deal of the work.

GOLF

This spring, golf received its initial trial as a sport in the city high schools. The physical education directors of the four city high schools had a meeting on April 22 to promote the interest in golf and to arrange tournaments among the four schools.

It was decided that each high school was to have a ladder tournament in order to find the twelve best golfers of each school from which a six man team would be chosen, with the other six as alternates.

Mr. Kennedy was chosen as director of golf for North Central and he with the help of a committee of three boys started the ladder tournament and selected the team of twelve. The squad of twelve men was picked by May 1, and North Central had its first practice round over the Manito golf course, which had been given over to the high schools to use during the tournament, on May 5. North Central was allowed another practice round over this course on May 13.

In the inter-school tournament, each high school played each other school two rounds which made six matches for each school. North Central had its first match with Hillyard on May 20, with Gonzaga on May 24 and Lewis and Clark on May 26.

Golf was not a letter sport this year, but if it proves popular enough it will be inaugurated as a letter sport with tennis in a few years.

Tennis Squad

Late in March the tennis courts were opened for play. Coach Barnes started the ladder tournament in April with about sixty boys participating.

Later in April the tennis squad was cut to twenty members. The first nine ranking players were immediately placed on the first team. The rest of the players left on the squad held an elimination tournament to determine who would get the tenth position. Harold Penhallurich won the tournament.

Following are the names of the players in order of their rank: Roland Johnson, Richard Hickey, Lyoyd Peterson, Robert Crosby, Curtis Scott, Thomas Carr, Jack Gilbert, Robert Kipp, Clayton Shea, Harold Penhallurich.

A game with Otis Orchards opened the Indians' tennis season. Otis Orchard proved to be an easy foe losing eight of the nine matches played.

Summary: Otis Orchards vs. North Central:

Johnson, N. C., beat J. Ulowetz, O. O., 6-2, 6-1.

Peterson, N. C., beat Fisher, O. O., 6-3, 6-2.

Baseball

The Indian's baseball season started April third with a win over Whitworth college. The game was a practice tilt, and Coach Jacky used a great many substitutes during the seven innings that the game lasted. North Central won the game 15-0.

Springdale was the second team met during the practice season. Springdale offered real competition, pushing the Indians to the limit to win. In this game, Kingen, the Indian's pitcher, held the opposing nine to three hits. The Red and Black nine gathered six hits from the Springdale chucker. The first score came in the sixth inning when Henderson of North Central scored. In that same inning, a Springdale player scored to even the count. Gullidge scored again in the eighth to put the Indians in the lead. The final count was 2 for North Central and 1 for Springdale.

Colfax, the third team played, failed to stop the Indians in their victorious march. North Central started out by scoring two runs in the first inning. The second inning proved to be a scoring spree with the Indians getting five runs and Colfax two. From then on the final outcome was never in doubt. The game ended with the Red and Black leading 13-7.

The Indians entered the city series with a game against Gonzaga on April seventeenth. Gonzaga led until the fourth inning when the North-siders hit their stride and made seven tallies. In the eighth inning the Indians made two more counts to bring the final total to nine for the Red and Black and three for the Bullpups. Rea, Anderson and Gullidge led the scoring attack with three hits and one run apiece.

On April twenty eighth the Gonzaga baseball team won its first victory over the North Central squad that it has won in years.

From the start the game proved to be a thriller. The score was close with both sides making use of all the "breaks." Paul Andersons who usually plays in the outfield, pitched the whole game, allowing only two hits.

The score was tied until the eighth inning, when Gonzaga executed a squeeze play to bring in the winning run.

Roy Henderson and Al Kingen were the only players who crossed the home plate.

The final score was two to three in favor of the Bullpups.

The Indians started the month of May with a baseball victory over the Tigers.

From start to finish the game was exciting. Due to a home run by Rea, the Northsiders went into an early lead; but the Southsiders tied the score by the eighth inning.

Going into the last inning with the score tied, the Indians made a desperate effort to break the tie. George Tiefel got on base. Another Red and Black batter hit an infield ball that was fumbled, and Tiefel started to run to third. Tiefel rounded third and ran home with the winning run. The score ended with the Indians leading two to three.

Al Kingen pitched a fine game for the Northsiders with Rea doing good work behind the bat.

North Central's supporters had the joy of seeing the Indian baseball team take the Panthers by a score of ten to four.

This game was figured by the team to be one of the hardest on the schedule. Hillyard had sixteen lettermen report for the opening practice and had high hopes of winning the pennant this year.

Kingen held the Panthers to six hits. He fanned thirteen of the Hillyard team. George Tiefel found his hitting eye for the first time this season. In four times at bat, Tiefel hit three doubles and one single.

Another heavy batter was "Peewee" Murray who hit the ball three time in four trips to the plate. Anderson brought in three runs in the eighth with a liner down the third base line.

On the Panther team the pitchers didn't have such a good time for the Indian batters gathered twelve hits.

SECOND L. C. GAME

For the second time in the 1930 series the Tigers bowed to the Indians on the baseball diamond.

First blood was drawn by the Northsiders in the third inning. Ev Henderson and Rea both succeeded in bringing in a run. No more scores were made until the sixth inning when the Tigers started a rally that was stopped only after they had made two runs to tie the score. In the eighth inning the Indians broke the tie by getting two runs.

The ninth inning proved to be one of heavy scoring for both sides. In the first half the boys from North Central scored three runs. Lewis and Clark retaliated with a rally that at first appeared dangerous, but they fell two points short and lost the game seven to two.

THIRD GONZAGA GAME

North Central's series with Gonzaga ended

after the Indians took the last game of the three game series 12-8.

Paul Anderson, the left-handed hurler, pitched a fine game for the Northsiders allowing only ten hits and fanning nine. "Babe" Rea handled the big stick for the Indians, collecting three hits in five trips to the plate. George Tiefel hit a two bagger to help the Indians win.

For the first three innings the game was close, but during the fourth and fifth innings the Red and Black team started a scoring spree which netted them nine runs. Gonzaga made a desperate effort to catch the Indians in the sixth and seventh innings, but the Bullpups gathered only five runs.

Baseball Players

AL KINGEN

Al Kingen, last year's pitcher, was back again this year doing good work for the team. Al besides being a good pitcher is a dangerous man at the plate. In the batting column Al ranks way up. He is one of the best players on the team.

PAUL ANDERSON

Paul Anderson, another last year's man, was back again this year as a real asset to the team. Paul is a left handed outfielder who occasionally pitched last season. This year with but one regular pitcher back, Paul went into the box as a relief hurler. He pitched the entire game against Gonzaga, allowing them only two hits. Paul is one of the steadiest batters on the team.

MELVIN GULLIDGE

Melvin Gullidge, a new man on the team, played at first. Mel handled the job like a veteran would. He is a dependable player both on defense and offense.

REA

Rea filled the catcher's shoes in fine shape. Although a new man, Rea fitted in with the rest of the players. In the first Tiger game, Rea put the Indians in the lead with a home run. All season he has been playing good ball behind the bat, besides wielding a heavy stick at the plate.

GEORGE TIEFEL

George Tiefel, veteran shortstop, played the position again this season. On the defense there are few players who can equal him. Last year he wasn't so good on the batting, but this year he found the ball more frequently. In the first Lewis and Clark game, Tiefel brought in the winning run.

ROY HENDERSON

A new man to baseball took care of third base for the Indians this season. Roy Henderson was another one of the strong links in the infield chain. Roy played a good game and contributed his share to the Red and Black's victories.

JOHN SOMMER

John Sommer was well acquainted with his position in the outfield. Sommer was stronger as a defensive player than he was as an offensive player, although he did good batting when it was needed. His services to the team in the outfield were invaluable.

JAMES McBROOM

Two years ago a little red-headed boy applied for the position of manager. Being rejected as the manager, he stayed out as the mascot. Last year he was the assistant manager.

Swimming Squad

With only three lettermen, Bobby Gray, Bill Shaw and Bill Nolan, back for swimming, Coach Guy Barnes did not have a very pleasant outlook for a championship team.

The swimming team started out the season with the interclass meet. The juniors won the meet this year by defeating the seniors 33 to 26. Francis Thyrian starred for the juniors and Bobby Gray for the seniors.

In the first half of the handicap meet with the girls the boys came out ahead, the score being 43 to 34. Bobby Gray starred for the boys with 13 points and Dorothy Schumaker was high for the girls with 6 points. In the second half of the handicap meet the girls narrowed the margin but the boys managed to win by one point, 80 to 79.

North Central had two swimming meets with Washington State college, coming in first in both, one in the North Central tank and one at Pullman. The score of the first meet was 38 to 21. Bobby Gray was high point man for North Central with $11\frac{1}{4}$ points and Bill Ross was high for W. S. C. with 8 points. North Central won the second meet 32 to 27. Gray and Ross were high point men in this meet also, Gray having 10 points and Ross $11\frac{1}{4}$.

LEWIS AND CLARK MEET

North Central swimmers did not have a very successful season this year because they lost the most important meet of the season to Lewis and Clark 38 to 21.

Besides winning the meet, the Lewis and Clark mermen established four city records. Jack Violette set a new record in the 40 yard dash and Jack Mott established a new mark in the 100 yard backstroke. The varsity and freshman relay also set new records.

Bill Shaw was high point man for the Indians with 6 points, getting first in the dives and a third in the 40 yard dash.

Summary of the meet is as follows:

40-yard dash—Violette (L. C.), first; Lambert (L. C.), second; Shaw (N. C.), third. Time, 20.2 (new record).

220-yard dash—Mott (L. C.), first; Paine (L. C.), second; Dralle (N. C.), third. Time, 2:43.8.

Dives—Shaw (N. C.), first, 92.6; Gray (N. C.), second, 86.5; Grandetta (L. C.), third, 66.8.

100-yard free style—Violette (L. C.), first; Lambert (L. C.), second; Thyrian (N. C.), third. Time, 1:01.5.

Relay—won by Lewis and Clark (Mott, Williams, Violette and Lambert). Time, 1:25.6 (new record).

Swimmers

BILL SHAW, CAPTAIN

Bill Shaw, winner of three letters in swimming was elected captain of the team by a meeting of the lettermen. This is Bill's second year in that position. He holds the record of having won first place in the dives three years in succession. Bill was high point man for the Indians in the meet with Lewis and Clark with 6 points, having taken first place in the dives and third in the 40 yard dash.

CARL DRALLE

Carl Dralle is the other man on the squad to win his first award in swimming. In the meet with L. C., Carl placed third in the 220 yard dash. Carl placed second in the 220 yard free style in the meet with W. S. C., and in the second meet placed first in the 220 yard dash and third in the 100 yard back stroke.

CHARLES "GRANNY" HAUTER

Charles Hauter was the other member of the swimming team to win his second award. Granny won his first letter two years ago but could not compete last year because of ineligibility. Hauter took second place in the 100 yard back stroke in both meets with W. S. C.

CLAYTON SHEA

Clayton Shea won his first award in swimming this year. Shea was the only man on the squad besides Bill Shaw who collected a first in the meet with Lewis and Clark. He dragged down his first place in the 100 yard breast stroke. Shea placed second in the 100 yard breast stroke in both meets with Washington State college.

BOBBY GRAY

Bobby Gray won his second award in swimming this year. In the meet with L. C., Bob won second place in the dives and third in the 100 yard back stroke. In both meets with Washington State college, Bob was high point man for N. C. In the first meet he pulled down 11¼ points and in the second meet he netted 10 counters.

BILL RITTER' MANAGER

Bill Ritter was appointed swim manager by Coach Guy Barnes because of his long experience on the squad. Bill has been out for swimming the last three years but has not been fortunate enough to win his award in swimming. Because of his excellent spirit shown in turning out, Coach Barnes gave him the appointment because he deserved to win his letter.

SWIMMING HANDICAP MEET

After a hard fight, the boys were victorious over the mermaids in the annual handicap meet. The relay was the deciding point and creates a good deal of excitement and cheers on the part of the audience. The final score was 80 to 79.

Dorothy Schumacher was high point winner in the first half of the meet taking 6 points. Anna Louise Engdahl won this same honor in the second half with 15 points.

Track

When Coach J. Wesley Taylor issued the first call for track early this spring, about forty men responded to the cinder path. Although this was not a very large number, many boys were out for basketball and swimming and could not turn out until later in the season. The prospects for a winning track team looked poor as there were only three letterman back from last year's team: Frank Bennett, Everett McNew and Robert Grieve.

In the annual novice meet, Coach Taylor uncovered some promising material among the non-lettermen that would improve as the season advanced. As there were only the three lettermen back, the boys who showed up well in this meet will receive a birth on the regular team.

The first meet of this year was with Gonzaga high school on the North Central playfield on the 16th of April.

GONZAGA MEET

The North Central track team showed quite a lot of class when it defeated the Gonzaga track team by the decisive score of $84\frac{1}{2}$ to $36\frac{1}{2}$. Out of the thirteen events North Central managed to grab down eleven first places to Gonzaga's two.

North Central started its lead by taking a first and third in the first event and after that stayed in front throughout the rest of the meet. Martin was high point man for North Central with a total of 13 points. He took two firsts, one in the 120-yard high hurdles and the other first in the broad jump. He also placed second in the 220-yard low hurdles. Everett McNew was second high point man for North Central with 10 points. He placed first in the 11-yard dash and first in the 220-yard dash. Other men who made firsts for North Central are: Castle, 220-yard low hurdles; Fuller, mile run; Grover and Schimke, tied in the pole vault; Grieve, high jump; Beeson, shot put; Howard McNew, discus; and Bennett, javelin.

Masterson was high point man for Gonzaga with $6\frac{1}{4}$ points. He got one of the two firsts for Gonzaga in the 880-yard run. He was also a member of the winning relay team. Riley was second high for Gonzaga with $5\frac{1}{4}$ points. With a cold wind blowing and the black clouds hanging low, the North Central track stars came out victorious over the Lewis and Clark Tigers in the annual track meet by the score of 72 to 50. North Central has been superior over Lewis and Clark in track, having won 13 out of 19 meets.

Starting out by winning first and second places in the 100-yard dash, North Central got an early lead and hung on to it throughout the meet. The Indians had an abundance of good sprint material, winning the first two places in the 100-yard dash and all three places in the 220-yard dash.

Girls' Sports

TENNIS

The main event of the 1929 tennis season was the meet with Lewis and Clark. Although our girls put up a good fight, they were defeated. Those who won recognition were Ruth Woodruff, captain, white star; Evelyn Henkle, black star; Catherine Dittebrandt, tennis insignia; Marlowe Dittebrandt, black star; Betty Cook, black star; Colleen Thompson, letter; Edla Swanson, letter.

An unusually large number of girls who look promising for the big meet next fall with Lewis and Clark turned out for tennis this spring. Meets have been played with Otis Orchard and West Valley. Our team was defeated in both meets.

The senior girls who will be lost from the team are: Marlowe Dittebrandt, Betty Cook, Catherine Dittebrandt, Martha Schneider and Ruth Woodruff.

SWIMMING

The seniors were victorious in the interclass meet, and the juniors took second place. Anna Louise Engdahl was captain of the team for 1929.

BASKETBALL

The sophomore B girls' basketball team took first place in the interclass series. Belle White was the captain.

This semester there were seven teams although always before there have been four.

HIKING

Neoma Rogers headed the hiking for the fall semester, and Miss Belden was the faculty director. The girls hiked to Indian Canyon, Bowl and Pitcher, Down River, and Dartford.

The Hiking club was organized ten years ago as a part of the personal efficiency department. Hikes, which average ten miles, are made every two weeks. In order to get an emblem, a girl must hike one hundred miles in three consecutive semesters.

GIRLS' BASEBALL

Girls' baseball has progressed rapidly this spring under the instruction of Miss Waters and Miss Jahreiss. Tournaments have been played on May 8, 13 and 21. Betty Bennett was appointed manager with Edna Webb to assist her as chairman.

Captains of the teams are as follows:

Senior, Carolyn Wagner; Junior, Virginia Bentley; Sophomore, Marie Evans; Freshman, Hazel Glatfelty.

Senior girls who have been turning out for baseball are: Carolyn Wagner, Betty Bennett, Olga Cardwell, Catherine Dittebrandt, Marlowe Dittebrandt, Catherine Dunstan, Ellen Fillerup, Elvera Miller, Elizabeth Perry, Virginia Rothacker, Rosella Taitch, Shirley Thorpe, Doris Warren, Edna Webb and Mildred Young.

All girls are invited to turn out for baseball and those who do not will miss a lot of fun.

GIRLS' SWIMMING

Anna Louise Engdahl is captain of the girls' swimming team this spring and Aurelia Benedict is the manager. Every spring two meets are staged with the Lewis and Clark mermaids.

Senior A girls who are on the team are as follows: Kathleen Flynn, Gretchen Dressel, Doris Lee, Catherine Dittebrandt, Marlowe Dittebrandt and Virginia Rothacker.

"Pee Wee" Murray came to North Central from the coast where he had played high school ball. He played second base for the Indians in fine shape. Usually Murray plays a good defensive as well as offensive game.

EV HENDERSON

Another one of the veteran outfielders was Ev Henderson who played a "bang up" game both last year and this. Last year he was dangerous enough to the opposing pitchers, but this year he was more dangerous than ever.

THIRD L. C. BASEBALL GAME

In the third game of the Tiger-Indian series, the Northsiders met their second baseball defeat in the city race.

With the Indians leading two games to none, the Tigers came back with determination to win the third game eleven to five.

The first inning spelled defeat for the Red and Black team. Kingen was not warmed up and walked four men, then he settled down to pitch a good game. One of the Tigers hit a two-bagger to bring in three runs. Then two more runs were scored in the fatal first inning.

In the Indian's half of the first and second innings, four runs were scored. Then, the Indians failed to score again until the ninth inning when a rally netted one run. Meanwhile, the Tigers scored five more runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to bring their total to eleven.

Tiefel and Kingen were the best hitters for the Red and Black, each securing a two-base hit.

A nine inning melodrama

(The scene is in the Eiffel tower. Several collegians are sprawled around the room.)

One: Why did your wife beat you up?

Two: I called her my maple sugar.

Unus: What's that got to do with it?

Duo: Somebody told her maple sugar was refined sap.

(Then a sound of gabbling came from one corner. The person doing the mumbling allowed his jaw to get in the way of a sledge hammer and he has been speaking broken English ever since.)

HECT 2

(This act is laid in an igloo near the equator in Darkest Africa. From the skyscraper comes a gnashing of teeth, indicating that a woman is attempting to mesh her gears.)

The Victim: Umble mumble jigaboo jay!

Dentist: Yes, the daffydils are beginning to bloom.

Census taker: Why is English called the mother tongue?

Undertaker: I suppose because father doesn't get a chance to use it.

HECT 3

(Our stirring melodrama now turns from the stew pan to a sandpit to the spinach canning industry.)

Deadicator: I want reform; I want labor reform; I want tax reform; I want—

Vox populi: Chloroform.

(Suddenly the rival gangsters appear. The end is coming. The end is approaching. The end is arrove.)

Last fall Coach Taylor had a hard task in turning out a good cross country team as he had only one letterman, Francis Lufkin, back on the squad.

North Central lost the cross country meet with Lewis and Clark, our ancient foe from across the river this year by the score of 22 to 33. Kenneth Lendersteen, Lewis and Clark, was the first to cross the tape with Ray Hendricks, North Central, four feet behind him.

In the annual novice meet, run over the Stevens street course, Ray Hendricks finished first and Melvin Gullidge, second.

The interclass meet was won by the juniors with Ray Hendricks again placing first.

Ray Hendricks was chosen captain by the men on the team.

Ev McNew was walking along the street in Canada; furthermore he wasn't walking exactly straight. A passer-by stopped him and asked him how he had acquired the scar on his forehead.

"Hummmm, I guess I must have bit myself."

"But how could you bite yourself up there?"

"Gosh, I don't know; I must have stood on a chair."

An old maid went to have her picture taken and the photographer noticed her tying a rope around the bottom of her skirt.

"What's the idea of that?" he asked. "I can't take your picture that way."

"You can't fool me, young man" was the snappy retort. "I know you can see me upside down in that camera."

The yells of pain and anguish were coming from the building. A crowd had gathered and were looking at the structure with interest. Naomi Melde stopped and asked Kathleen Flynnne what the noise was.

Kathleen: "Oh, it isn't as bad as it sounds. That's only a dental college practicing their school yell."

A man at the beach last summer was easily the best swimmer there. He could dive and swim any stroke, but he excelled at treading water. He walked up and down the water front just as though he were on dry land. Everyone was watching him but none could understand why he was so good at treading water. Finally someone solved the mystery.

He was a mailman in Venice.

The other day in one of the downtown pressing shops there was a windowful of trousers. Some bore the legend 'Owner failed to call' and such tales. In the middle of the window was a pair of pants of alarming cut, color, and everything else. The finishing touch was a sign pinned to them.

The sign read, "These Trousers Uncalled For."

STATE TRACK MEET

In the annual state high school track and field meet held at Washington State College at Pullman, North Central won two fourth places. Everett McNew won fourth place in the 100-yard dash and Wayne Remer won fourth place in the 220-yard dash.

George Martin, after winning third place in the preliminary 120-yard high hurdles, tripped in the final race and did not place. Maurice Castle ran in the preliminary of the 220-yard low hurdles but did not place and did not get to run in the final race. Frank Bennett, the other member of the North Central track team to make the trip, could not enter the javelin throw because of his having a sore arm.

This year the Hi-Y club sponsored the handball tournament which attracted approximately sixty boys.

In the past it has been the custom for the gym department to sponsor this contest, but the gym department did not offer any awards. The Hi-Y club cooperated with the gym department this year and offered a silver loving cup and two medals as awards. It is hoped that this tournament will become an annual affair.

This semester has proved one of the most successful in the history of the school for dramatic activity. The "Cat O' Nine Tails" was a thrilling mystery which drew a large audience. Everyone knows what a success the class play "Stop Thief" was, so nothing more needs to be said about it. Beyond a doubt it was one of the best performances seen here for a long time.

It seems rather queer to be graduating and leaving high school days behind, but in just a few days now we will weigh anchor and set sail from North Central, some 250 strong. Like every other class that has graduated, we believe that ours is the biggest and best ever.

FOURTH L. C. BASEBALL GAME

Fighting desperately to stay in the race for the city championship, the Tigers took the fourth game of the North Central-Lewis and Clark series twelve to nine.

By winning this game the Tigers evened the count against the Indians each having won two games. The Tigers took the lead early in the game and were never headed off. North Central's team rallied a number of times during the game but failed to catch the Tigers. The Southsiders had a few "big innings" that netted them enough runs to win the game. Both sides played ragged ball.
